

7.2 Rural Canada

A decorative illustration of bamboo stalks and leaves in dark green and brown tones, positioned on the left side of the slide.

Early Rural Canada

- Until about 1850, Canada was practically all rural
- There were no real cities at all
- Places such as Quebec City and Ottawa were little more than large towns

Early Rural Canada

- The land had few large roads and no cars
- People farmed enough to feed themselves

A decorative illustration of bamboo stalks and leaves in dark green and brown tones, positioned on the left side of the slide.

Early Rural Canada

- Industries almost all involved the harvesting of the resources of the land or sea
- Besides farming people worked in the:

Early Rural Canada

Forestry

Early Rural Canada

Fishing

Early Rural Canada

- The types of business people that flourished in rural Canada included:

Store Keepers

Early Rural Canada

Blacksmith

Early Rural Canada

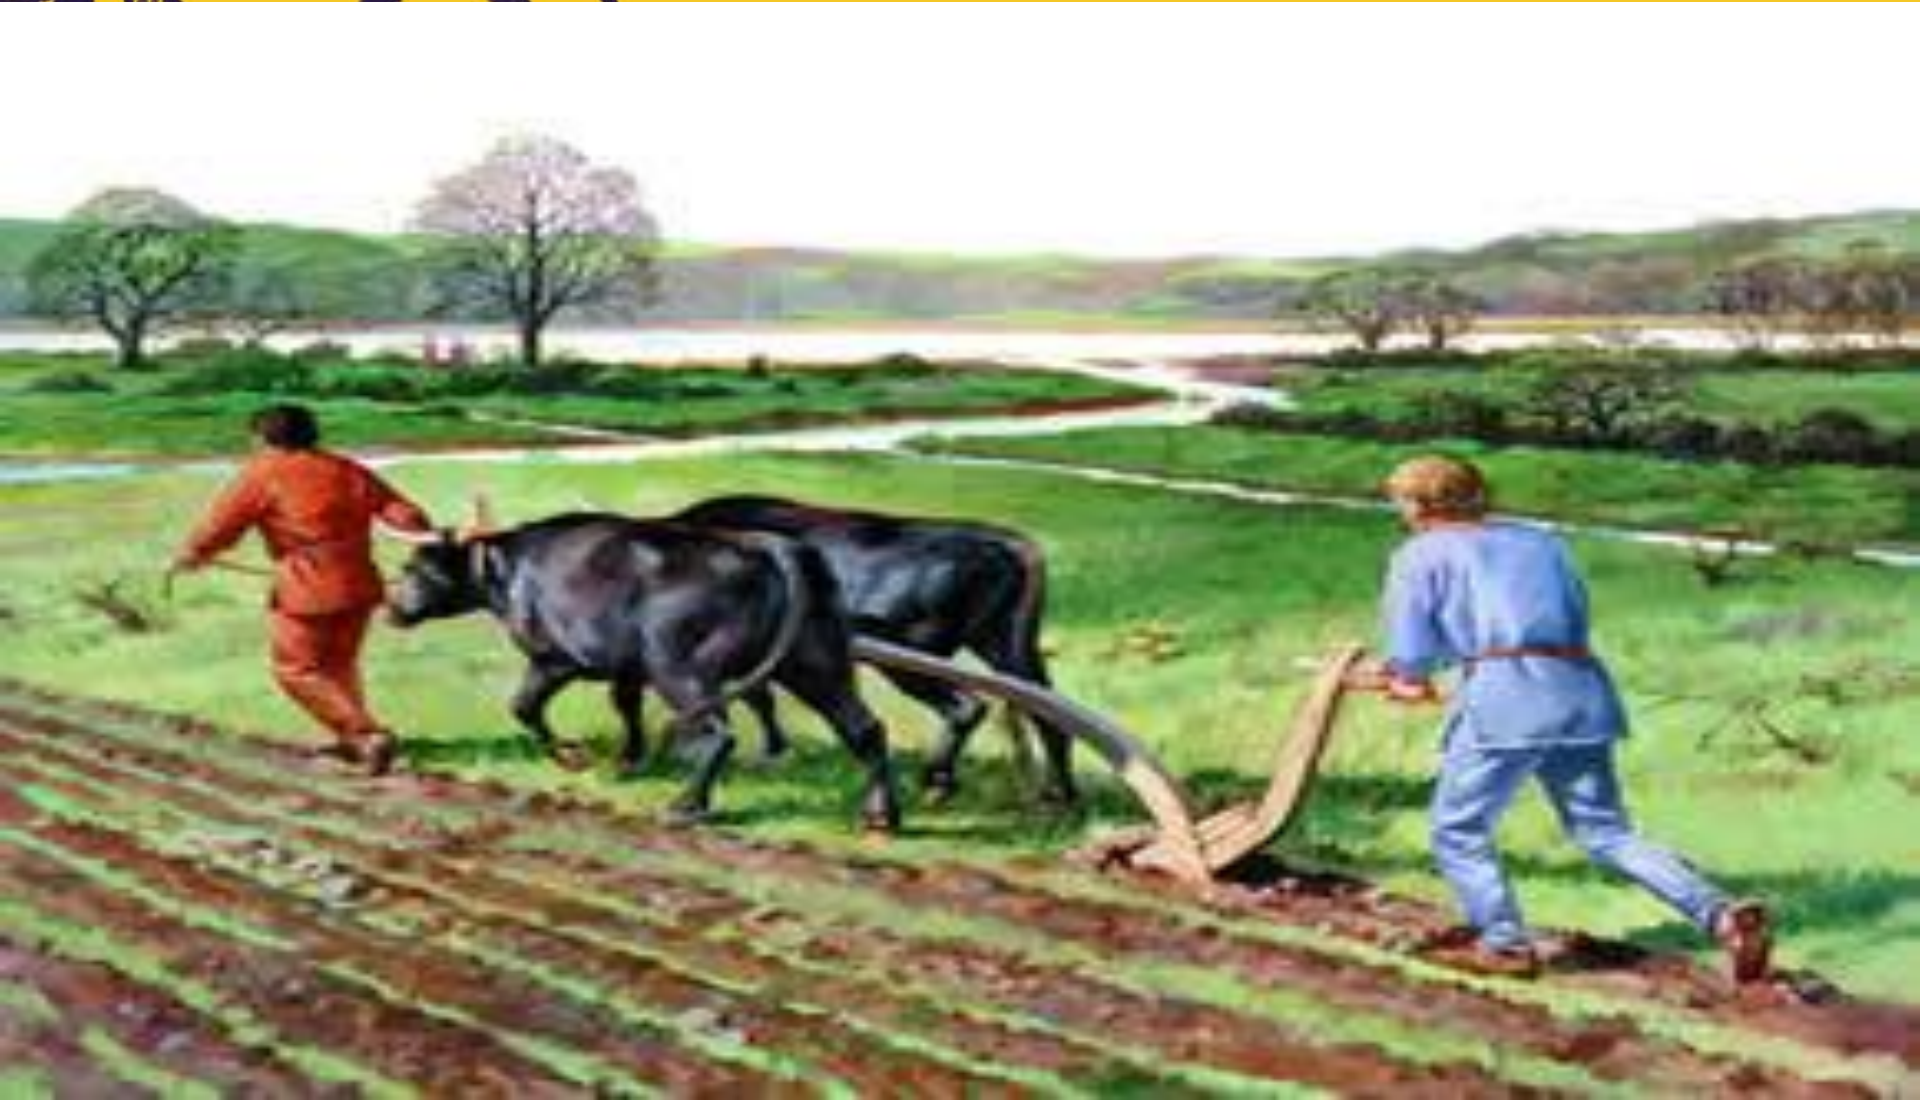

Miller

One Room School Houses

Ploughing Fields

Rural Canada Today

- Agribusiness- owning, and farming vast amounts of land

A decorative illustration of bamboo stalks and leaves in dark green and brown tones, positioned on the left side of the slide.

Rural Canada Today

- For example
- Chicken Agribusiness may have huge chicken barns that hold tens of thousands of birds

Rural Canada Today

Rural Canada Today

- Not only do they raise the chickens but they may also:

Butcher

Rural Canada Today

Package

A decorative graphic of bamboo stalks and leaves in a dark blue color, positioned on the left side of the slide.

Rural-Urban Migration

- Many people have been leaving rural areas of Canada and moving to urban areas.
- This movement of people has cause urbanization.
- Where many people move from rural areas into existing cities

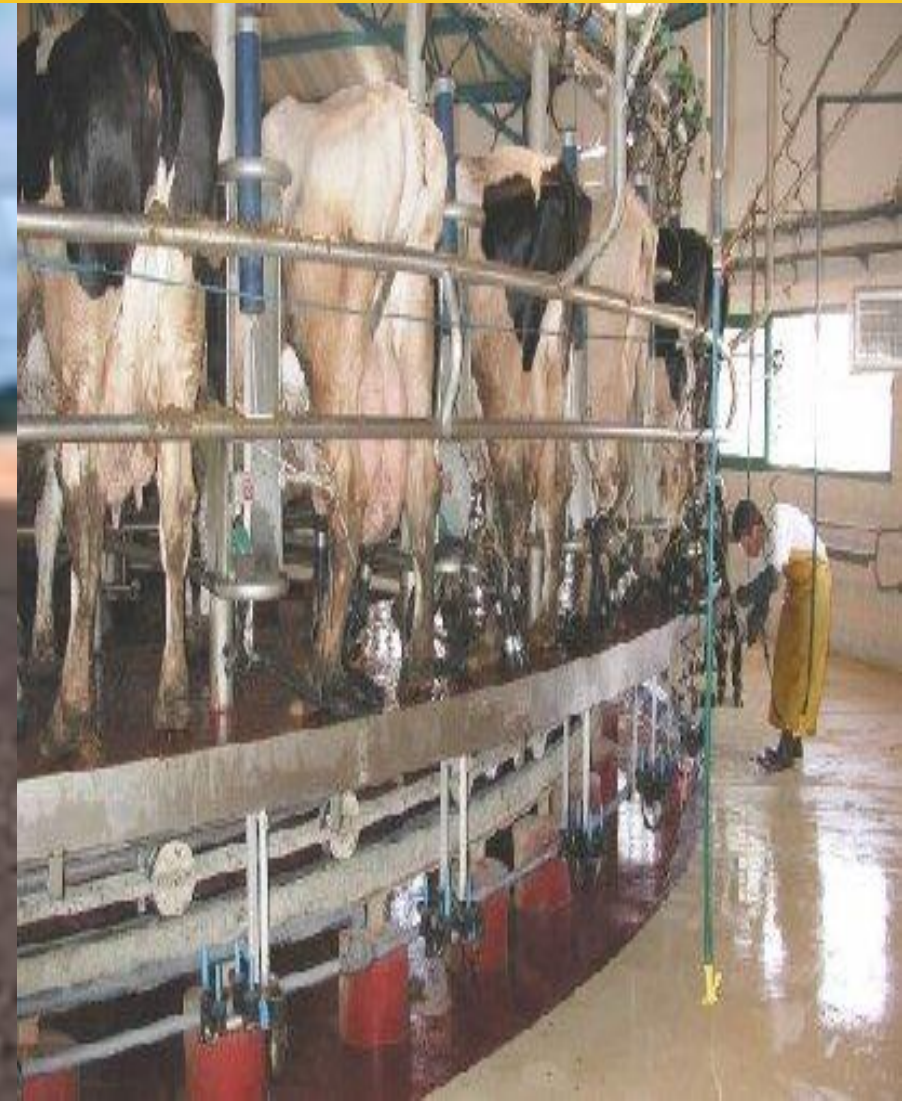

Rural-Urban Migration

- What caused this change?

Loss of Jobs on farms

Rural-Urban Migration

Rural-Urban Migration

- Urban Canada offers more jobs than rural Canada:

Rural-Urban Migration

- Some other reasons for leaving for the city are:

